Norbert Rillieux
(1806-1894)

Norbert Rillieux was a 19th century inventor, best known for inventing the vacuum evaporating pan which revolutionized the sugar refining industry. The pan replaced the process known as "The Jamaica Train" which employed slaves to laboriously scoop ladles of boiling sugar cane juice from kettle to kettle. The "Rillieux System" was also adapted for use in manufacturing other products such as sugar beets, soap, gelatin, and glue. Today, inventors continue to develop processes that provide superior quality products and reduce cost.
